

Beth Ellis Plein Air Workshop

Taking on The Coast!

Wells, Maine • June 22-26, 2010

(A workshop for experienced painters)

Beth designed this workshop for experienced plein air painters interested in raising the bar on their own painting technique.

On Tuesday evening, prior to the workshop, students will meet at The Beth Ellis Cove Gallery for a make-ready session to help each artist establish where to put his/her focus during this workshop. Then... day one will be all about painting surf (along the beautiful Marginal Way in Ogunquit). The next day we'll be doing a study of boats (Cape Porpoise in Kennebunkport is a favorite choice). The third day, we will incorporate figures into a coastal scene (on Wells or Ogunquit Beach, students choice). Day four is a thorough review and critique of the work.

Each painter will have the opportunity to spend focused time on some of the most alluring aspects of coastal painting. Beth's goal in this workshop is to have each student push beyond what they thought they could achieve by really studying the specifics about each subject. It's bound to be fun and deeply satisfying!

If you are a serious painter, looking to go the next step with your work and if you love the Coast of Maine, this workshop is for you. Limited to 8 students.
